

P-Rank: a publication ranking

P-Rank is a publication ranking intended to increase recognition of scholars with notable publication output.

There are many different ways in which notable publication output can be identified. Therefore, P-Rank comprises several rankings in which different journals are listed and further rankings may be added in the future. Also, P-Rank allows to adjust the way in which co-authored publications are counted. A description how P-Rank evaluates scholarly output can be found in the Methodology section.

In order to better acknowledge the publication output of young scholars, P-Rank provides multiple versions of each ranking, where in each version only those articles which have been published since a particular year are considered. Similarly, P-Rank allows to restrict the ranking to certain regions and countries in order to acknowledge potential differences in the research environment.

The ranking shown below has been generated with the following settings:

- Publications are evaluated with co-author bonus (see Methodology): 0
- Only those articles are considered which are published since: N/A
- If no countries or regions are listed below, all authors are considered. Otherwise, only those authors are considered who have an affiliation in the following regions and countries:

Methodology

For each author, P-Rank determines the articles which are published in journals listed in the journal list of the selected ranking. For each of these articles, the value is added to the total points of the author. Here, journal score is the score of the journal in the selected ranking, authors is the number of co-authors of the article, and bonus is the co-author bonus specified above. This means that with a co-author bonus of 0, the journal score is divided by the number of authors, and with a co-author bonus of 100, the full journal score is awarded regardless of the number of co-authors. With a co-author bonus of -100, only single-authored publications are counted.

The BWL - Handelsblatt uses the journal list of the Handelsblatt BWL Ranking 2014 (<https://www.handelsblatt.com/politik/konjunktur/bwl-ranking/>). The journal list of the Handelsblatt BWL Ranking 2014 has been slightly modified by removing non-English journals and proceedings from the list and eliminating duplicate ISSNs. The ranking provided here is neither supported nor endorsed by the Handelsblatt.

Provisions

1. P-Rank does not maintain a complete list of all relevant scholars and publications and will never be able to achieve completeness. Scholars are encouraged to add their ORCID iD on the P-Rank webpage, link their publications to their ORCID iD, and make them publicly visible. ORCID works with member organizations to make it easy to add publications to an ORCID iD.
2. P-Rank does not collect any primary data and only collects metadata about articles which are publicly seen in the ORCID record of included scholars. Scholars who have connected their ORCID iD to P-Rank, can check their record on the P-Rank webpage.
3. P-Rank seeks to maintain up-to-date information concerning the publication output of scholars, however, P-Rank does not perpetually poll ORCID for updates. Thus, there might be a delay in obtaining information about new articles and different author profiles may have received their last update at different times.
4. P-Rank is based on the belief that every ranking has severe shortcomings in respect to comparing productivity of scholars. Nevertheless, publishing research articles plays a major role in research dissemination and P-Rank aims at increasing recognition of scholars with notable publication output. P-Rank can not define what should be considered as notable publication output and encourages proposals for journal lists to be added to P-Rank. Please send such proposals to ranking@telematique.eu.
5. P-Rank must not be used as the sole mean of productivity assessment of individual scholars. Such assessments should always be based on a holistic evaluation of all relevant scholarly activities, including those which are not considered by P-Rank.
